3 personal goals for yourself for:

- Academic: my academic goal is to maintain a gpa of 3.5 or above, and to get more involved by going to office hours. i also want to start working on personal projects and get research opportunities with professors. i also want to pursue a business minor.
- Career: my main career goal is to expand my startup (kishakguru). i also wish to land an internship for this summer. for long term, i want to network more and build professional relationships with people in my field and in other fields as well.
- Personal: my personal goal for this year is to build on my self-confidence and to be comfortable doing things that are out of my comfort zone. this year i've also decided to live my life more, and say yes to practically everything because i tend not do a lot of things out of fear of judgment.

What do you wish to gain from the sisterhood?

i'm really looking for a support system that pushes me to grow. like i mentioned in my personal goals, i tend to now to things out of fear of judgement, and that also affects my confidence. i think being surrounded by a sisterhood that genuinely uplifts each other will help me break out of that.

i also want mentorship and accountability. whether it's someone to check in on me about staying on top of my academics, encourage me to pursue my goals, or just remind me that it's okay to ask for help, i want sisters who will push me to be my best self.

Why do you want to join Kappa Phi Gamma?

when i came for my first kphig event and got to talk to the sisters, i could tell pretty quickly that this was different. the way they talked about each other, the stories they shared, it felt real. like they genuinely cared about each other.

as a south asian woman at a big university, i've been looking for a space where i don't have to constantly explain myself or feel like i'm navigating everything alone. kphig offers that. but it's not just about the cultural connection, it's also about the values. the idea of uplifting each other up while also giving back to the community is something that resonates with me.

and i think what really stood out to me was hearing that sisters stay connected even after graduation. that tells me this isn't just a college thing, it's something that lasts.

i want to be part of a sisterhood that'll support me, challenge me to grow, and be there through the ups and downs. that's why i want to join kphig
